Design Story

Belgrove Residences features an architectural design blending softened edges and elongated forms, culminating in an elegant spire that enhances the building's verticality. Inspired by the flamingos of the Ras Al Khor Wildlife Sanctuary, the design embodies beauty, balance, grace, and elegance. Continuous frames on the east and west sides mirror the delicate form of flamingos, creating a slender and poised demeanor. The core is centrally placed, defining prime living areas on the north and south sides. Balconies punctuate the facade, offering intimate, private views tailored to the apartment types and sizes. The minimalist and modern design stands as a recognizable landmark, with the striking spire serving as both a powerful architectural statement and a functional element.
